

Shelter of Hope - LiberarSè - Mexico

LiberarSè - Being drug-free and becoming protagonists of our own story - Mexico

In Mexico, because of a wide social inequality gap, a small number of people controls most of the resources such as jobs, wealth, access to health treatment, and education. This is conducive to unemployment and marginalisation mainly for the most vulnerable young people who can only find temporary jobs, or are exploited by organised crime for drug production, use, and trafficking.

Addiction to drug, alcohol, and other toxic substances is a persistent and growing problem for the youth in the Eastern part of Mexico City.

The “Refugio de la Esperanza” (Shelter of Hope) - LiberarSè project in Nezahualcoyotl is a concrete answer to the needs stemming from such harsh social conditions. It is a place open to everybody – including people without substantial economic resources – to free those who were enslaved by drugs complete their post-detoxication program and integrate them into society.
